I'm trying to have a styling/style sheet be applied to new text that's entered. I currently have this.

$('#textarea[name="message"]').keyup(function() { $(this).parent().css({ 'background': '#fff', 'border': '1px solid #1e89ec', 'color': '#1e89ec' }); });
```

This code is only applying it to the initial text that is written. I want it to apply to the text that was actually entered, i.e. If I started typing "Hi!", the background of "Hi!" would be set and would become white. Does anyone know how to do this? A: Try

$('#textarea[name="message"]').keyup(function() { $(this).parent().text($(this).val()); });
```

 Q: Why might a Bitcoin investor have allocated a large amount of their funds to a single bitcoin? As a retail investor (in the US), I have invested in a total of five Bitcoin (BTC) at a single time of $4,300. I first invested in bitcoin in early 2013, and did so because I assumed the price would increase. As the price rose over the years, I never sold a single coin. Over that time, the price has fluctuated from $400 to $11,000. The current price is about $6,000. Why might an investor do that? Is it possible (and practical) to do it again? Could it be some sort of "hedge" strategy? Or, maybe he is just trying to get in on a rally? Do market participants perform such actions or is it just some individual trading? A: It's only practical to do so once. Imagine someone who buys one BTC. They don't know what
